

S A N

Consider well the member, and, if you have no probable hope of sanation, cut it off quickly. Wifeman's Surgery.

SANATIVE. adj. [from sanare.] Powerful to cure; healing. The vapour of coltsfoot hath a sanative virtue towards the lungs. Bacon's Natural History.

SANATIVENESS. n. f. [from sanative.] Power to cure.

SANCTIFICATION. n. f. [from sanctificare, Fr. from sanctifico, low Latin.]

1. The state of being freed, or act of freeing from the dominion of sin for the time to come. The grace of his sanctification and life, which was first received in him, might pass from him to his whole race, as malediction came from Adam unto all mankind. Hosker.

2. The act of making holy; consecration. The bishop kneels before the cross, and devoutly adores and kisses it: after this follows a long prayer for the sanctification of that new sign of the cross. Stillington.

SANCTIFIER. n. f. [from sanctifico.] He that sanctifies or makes holy.

To be the sanctifier of a people, and to be their God, is all one. Derham's Physico-Theology.

TO SANCTIFY. v. a. [from sanctifico, Fr. sanctifico, Latin.]

1. To free from the power of sin for the time to come. For if the blood of bulls, sprinkling the unclean, sanctifies to the purifying of the flesh, how much more shall the blood of Christ? Heb. ix. 13.

2. To make holy; to make a means of holiness. The gospel, by not making many things unclean, as the law did, hath sanctified those things generally to all, which particularly each man to himself must sanctify by a reverend and holy use. Hosker.

Those judgments God hath been pleased to send upon me, are so much the more welcome, as a means which his mercy hath sanctified to me as to make me repent of that unjust act. King Charles.

Those external things are neither parts of our devotion, or by any strength in themselves direct causes of it; but the grace of God is pleased to move us by ways suitable to our nature, and to sanctify these sensible helps to higher purposes. South.

What actions can express the intire purity of thought, which refines and sanctifies a virtuous man? Addison.

3. To make free from guilt. The holy man, amaz'd at what he saw, Made haste to sanctify the blifs by law. Dryden.

4. To secure from violation. Truth guards the poet, sanctifies the line. Pope.

SANCTIMONIOUS. adj. [from sanctimonia, Latin.] Saintly; having the appearance of sanctity.

A sanctimonious pretence, under a pomp of form, without the grace of an inward integrity, will not serve the turn. L'Estrange.

SANCTIMONY. n. f. [from sanctimonia, Latin.] Holiness; scrupulous austerity; appearance of holiness. If sanctimony, and a frail vow between an errant Barbarian and a superfluous Venetian, be not too hard for my wit, and all the tribe of hell, thou shalt enjoy her. Shak. Othello.

Her pretence is a pilgrimage to St. Jaques le Grand, which holy undertaking, with most austere sanctimony, the accomplished. Shakespeare's All's well that ends well.

There was great reason why all discreet princes should beware of yielding hasty belief to the robes of sanctimony. Rel.

SANCTION. n. f. [from sanctio, Fr. sanctio, Latin.]

1. The act of confirmation which gives to any thing its obligatory power; ratification. I have kill'd a slave, And of his blood caus'd to be mixt with wine: Fill every man his bowl. There cannot be A fitter drink to make this sanction in. Ben. Johnf. Catil.

Against the publick sanctions of the peace, With fates averle, the rout in arms resort, To force their monarch. Dryden's Æn.

There needs no positive law or sanction of God to stamp an obliquity upon such a disobedience. South.

By the laws of men, enacted by civil power, gratitude is not enforced; that is, not enjoined by the sanction of penalties, to be inflicted upon the person that shall not be found grateful. South's Sermons.

The satisfactions of the Christian life, in its present practice and future hopes, are not the mere raptures of enthusiasm, as the strictest professors of reason have added the sanction of their testimony. Watts.

This word is often made the sanction of an oath: it is reckoned a great commendation to be a man of honour. Swift.

Wanting sanction and authority, it is only yet a private work. Baker on Learning.

2. A law; a decree ratified. Improper. 'Tis the first sanction nature gave to man, Each other to assist in what they can. Denham.

SANCTITUDE. n. f. [from sanctus, Latin.] Holiness; goodness; faintness. In their looks divine The image of their glorious Maker shone, Truth, wisdom, sanctitude, serene and pure. Milton.

S A N

SANCTITY. n. f. [from sanctitas, Latin.]

1. Holiness; the state of being holy. At his touch, Such sanctity hath heaven given his hand, They presently amend. Shakespeare.

God attributes to place No sanctity, if none be thither brought By men who there frequent. Milton.

2. Goodness; the quality of being good; purity; godliness. This youth I reliev'd with such sanctity of love, And to his image, which methought did promise Most venerable worth, did I devotion. Shakespeare.

It was an observation of the ancient Romans, that their empire had not more increased by the strength of their arms than the sanctity of their manners. Addison.

3. Saint; holy being. About him all the sanctities of heav'n Stood thick as stars, and from his sight receiv'd Beatitude pass'd utterance. Milton.

TO SANCTUARISE. v. n. [from sanctuary.] To shelter by means of sacred privileges. No place indeed should murder sanctuarise. Shakespeare.

SANCTUARY. n. f. [from sanctuarium, Fr. sanctuarium, Latin.]

1. A holy place; holy ground. Properly the penitential, or most retired and awful part of a temple. Having waste ground enough, Shall we desire to raze the sanctuary, And pitch our evils there. Shakespeare.

They often plac'd Within his sanctuary itself their shrines. Milton.

Let it not be imagined, that they contribute nothing to the happiness of the country who only serve God in the duties of a holy life, who attend his sanctuary, and daily address his goodness. Rogers's Sermon.

2. A place of protection; a sacred asylum: whence a sanctuary man, one who takes shelter in a holy place. Come, my boy, we will to sanctuary. Shakespeare. R. III.

I'll hence forthwith unto the sanctuary. To save at least the heir of Edward's right. Shak. H. VI.

Oft have I heard of sanctuary men; But sanctuary children, ne'er 'till now, He fled to Beverly, where he and divers of his company registered themselves sanctuary men. Bacon's Henry VII.

Howsoever the sanctuary man was protected from his creditors, yet his goods out of sanctuary should not. Bacon's H. VII.

This our high place, our sanctuary, our hill. Milton.

3. Shelter; protection. What are the bulls to the frogs, or the lakes to the meadows? Very much, says the frog; for he that's worried will be sure to find sanctuary in the fens. L'Estrange.

The admirable works of painting were made fuel for the fire; but some reliques of it took sanctuary under ground, and escaped the common destiny. Dryden's Dufresny.

SAND. n. f. [from sand, Danish and Dutch.]

1. Particles of stone not conjoined, or stone broken to powder. That finer matter called sands, is no other than very small pebbles. Here I th' sands These I'll rake up, the post un*sanctified*. Shakespeare. K. Lear.

Hark, the fatal followers do pursue! The sands are number'd that make up my life: Here must I stay, and here my life must end. Shak. H. VI.

Sand hath always its root in clay, and there be no veins of sand any great depth within the earth. Bacon.

Calling for more paper to re*scribe*, king Philip shew'd him the difference betwixt the ink box and sand box. Hosker.

If quicksilver be put into a convenient glass vessel, and that vessel exactly stopp'd, and kept for ten weeks in a sand furnace, whose heat may be constant, the corpuscles that constitute the quicksilver will, after innumerable revolutions, be so connected to one another, that they will appear in the form of a red powder. Boyle.

Engag'd with money bags, as bold As men with sand bags did of old. Hudibras.

The force of water casts gold out from the bowels of mountains, and exposes it among the sands of rivers. Dryden.

Shells are found in the great sand pit at Woolwich. Woodward.

Celia and I, the other days, Walk'd o'er the sand hills to the sea. Prior.

2. Barren country covered with sands. Most of his army being slain, he, with a few of his friends, fought to save themselves by flight over the desert sands. Kneller.

Her fons spread Beneath Gibraltar to the Lybian sands. Milton.

SANDAL. n. f. [from sandalum, Fr. sandalum, Latin.] A loose shoe. Thus sung the uncouth swain to th' oaks and rills, While the still morn went out with sandals grey. Milton.

From his robe Flows light ineffable: his harp, his quiver, And Lycian bow are gold: with golden sandals. Prior.

His feet are shod. The

S A N

The sandals of celestial moid, Fledg'd with ambrosial plumes, and rich with gold, Surround her feet. Pope's Odyssey.

SANDARAK. n. f. [from sandaraca, Fr. sandaraca, Latin.]

1. A mineral of a bright right colour, not much unlike to red arsenick. Bailey.

2. A white gum oozing out of the juniper-tree. Bailey.

SANDBLIND. adj. [from sand and blind.] Having a defect in the eyes, by which small particles appear to fly before them. My true begotten father, being more than sandblind, high gravelblind, knows me not. Shakespeare. Merch. of Venice.

SANDBOX Tree. n. f. [from sand, Latin.] A plant. It hath a funnel-shaped flower, consisting of one leaf, which is spread open at the brim, and slightly cut into twelve parts: at the bottom of the tube is placed the pointal, which afterwards becomes a globular compressed fruit, which has twelve cells, in each of which is contained one roundish flat seed. The fruit of this plant, if suffered to remain on 'till they are fully ripe, burst in the heat of the day with a violent explosion, making a noise like the firing of a pistol, and hereby the seeds are thrown about to a considerable distance. These seeds, when green, vomit and purge, and are supposed to be somewhat a kin to nux vomica. Miller.

SANDED. adj. [from sand.]

1. Covered with sand; barren. In well sanded lands little or no snow lies. Mortimer.

The river pours along Refill'd, roaring dreadful down it comes; Then o'er the sanded valley floating spreads. Thomson.

2. Marked with small spots; variegated with dusky specks. My hounds are bred out of the Spartan kind, So flew'd, to sanded, and their heads are hung With ears that sweep away the morning dew; Crook-knee'd and dewlap'd, like Thebanian bulls; Slow in pursuit; but match'd in mouth like bells, Each under each. Shakespeare.

SANDERLING. n. f. A bird. Among the first sort we reckon coots, sanderlings, pewets, and mewes. Corew.

SANDERS. n. f. [from santalum, Latin.] A precious kind of Indian wood, of which there are three sorts, red, yellow, and green. Bailey.

Aromatize it with sanders. Wifeman's Surgery.

SANDEVER. n. f. That which our English glassmen call sandever, and the French, of whom probably the name was borrowed, suindever, is that recement that is made when the materials of glass, namely, sand and a fixt lixiviate alkali, having been first baked together, and kept long in fusion, the mixture casts up the superfluous salt, which the workmen afterwards take off with ladles, and lay by as little worth. Boyle.

SANDISH. adj. [from sand.] Approaching to the nature of sand; loose; not close; not compact. Plant the tenuifolia and ranunculus in fresh sandish earth, taken from under the turf. Evelyn's Kalendar.

SANDSTONE. n. f. [from sand and stone.] Stone of a loose and friable kind, that easily crumbles into sand. Grains of gold in sandstone grey, variegated with a faint green and blue, from the mine of Costa Rica, which is not reckoned rich; but every hundred weight yields about an ounce of gold. Woodward.

SANDY. adj. [from sand.]

1. Abounding with sand; full of sand. I should not see the sandy hourglass run, But I should think of shallows and of flats. Shakespeare.

Safer shall he be on the sandy plains, Than where castles mounted stand. Shakespeare. H. VI.

A region to desert, dry, and sandy, that travellers are fain to carry water on their camels. Brown's Vulg. Errors.

Rough unwieldy earth, nor to the plough Nor to the cattle kind, with sandy stones And gravel o'er-abounding. Philips.

O'er sandy wilds were yellow harvests spread. Pope.

Favour, so bottomed upon the sandy foundation of personal respects only, cannot be long lived. Bacon's Villiers.

SANE. adj. [from sanus, Latin.] Sound; healthy. Baynard wrote a poem on preserving the body in a sane and found state. SANG.

The preterite of sang. Then sang Moses and Israel this song unto the Lord. Ex. xv.

These next they sang, of all creation first. Milton.

SANGUIFEROUS. adj. [from sanguis, Latin.] Conveying blood. The fifth conjugation of the nerves is branched to the muscles of the face, particularly the cheeks, whose sanguiferous vessels it twists about. Derham's Physico-Theology.

SANGUIFICATION. n. f. [from sanguis, Fr. sanguis, and facio, Lat.] The production of blood; the conversion of the chyle into blood. Since the lungs are the chief instrument of sanguification, the animal that has that organ faulty can never have the vital juices, derived from the blood, in a good state. Arbutnot.

Athmarick persons have voracious appetites, and consequently, for want of a right sanguification, are leucophlegmatick. Arbutnot on Ailments.

SANGUIFIER. n. f. [from sanguis and facio, Latin.] Producer of blood. Bitters, like choler, are the best sanguifiers, and also the best febrifuges. Player on the Humours.

TO SANGUIFY. v. n. [from sanguis and facio, Latin.] To produce blood. At the same time I think, I command: in inferior faculties, I walk, see, hear, digest, sanguify, and carnify, by the power of an individual soul. Hale.

SANGUINARY. adj. [from sanguinaris, Lat. sanguinaire, French; from sanguis, Latin.] Cruel; bloody; murderous. We may not propagate religion by wars, or by sanguinary persecutions to force consciences. Bacon.

The scene is now more sanguinary, and fuller of actors: never was such a confused mysterious civil war as this. Howel.

Passion transforms us into a kind of savages, and makes us brutal and sanguinary. Broom's Notes on the Odyssey.

SANGUINARY. n. f. [from sanguis, Lat.] An herb. Ainsworth.

SANGUINE. adj. [from sanguis, Fr. sanguineus, from sanguis, Lat.] 1. Red; having the colour of blood. This fellow Upbraided me about the rose I wear; Saying, the sanguine colour of the leaves Did represent my master's blushing cheeks. Shak. H. VI.

A stream of nect'rous humour issuing flow'd Sanguine. Milton.

Dire Tisiphone there keeps the ward, Girt in her sanguine gown. Dryden.

Her flag aloft, spread rustling to the wind, And sanguine streamers seem the flood to fire: The weaver, charm'd with what his loom design'd, Goes on to sea, and knows not to retire. Dryden.

2. Abounding with blood more than any other humour; cheerful. The cholerick fell short of the longevity of the sanguine. Bro.

Though these faults differ in their complexions as sanguine from melancholy, yet they are frequently united. Gov. of Tongue.

3. Warm; ardent; confident. A set of sanguine tempers ridicule, in the number of foppes, all such apprehensions. Swift.

SANGUINE. n. f. [from sanguis.] Blood colour. A grievously wound, From which forth gush'd a stream of gore, blood thick, That all her goodly garments stain'd around, And in deep sanguine dy'd the grassy ground. Fa. Queen.

SANGUINENESS. n. f. [from sanguine.] Ardour; heat of ex-

SANGUINITY. n. f. [from sanguine.] Confidence. Sanguinity is perhaps only used by Swift. Rage, or phrensy it may be, in some perhaps natural courage, or sanguineness of temper in others; but true valour it is not, if it knows not as well to suffer as to do. That mind is truly great, and only that, which stands above the power of all extrinck violence; which keeps itself a distinct principality, independent upon the outward man. Decay of Piety.

I very much distrust your sanguinity. Swift.

SANGUINEOUS. adj. [from sanguineus, Latin; sanguis, French.] 1. Constituting blood. This animal of Plato containeth not only sanguineus and reparable particles, but is made up of veins, nerves, and arteries. Brown's Vulgar Errors.

2. Abounding with blood. A plethorick constitution, in which true blood abounds, is called sanguineus. Arbutnot.

SANGUEDRIM. n. f. [from sanguis and drium, Latin.] The chief council among the Jews, consisting of seventy elders, over whom the high priest presided. SA'NICLE.

SA'NICLE. n. f. [from sanicle, Fr. sanicula, Latin.] A plant. It is an umbelliferous plant, and its flower consists of five leaves, placed orbicularly; but bent back to the centre of the flower, and resting on the empalement, which becomes a fruit composed of two seeds, which are gibbous and prickly on one side, but plain on the other. Miller.

SANIES. n. f. [Latin.] Thin matter; serous excretion. It began with a round crack in the skin, without other matter than a little sanies. Wifeman's Surgery.

SANIOUS. adj. [from sanies.] Running a thin serous matter, not a well digested pus. Observing the ulcer sanious, I propos'd digestion as the only way to remove the pain. Wifeman.

SANITY. n. f. [from sanitas, Latin.] Soundness of mind. How pregnant, sometimes, his replies are? A happiness that often madness hits on, Which sanity and reason could not be, So prosperously delivered of. Shakespeare. Hamlet.

SANK. The preterite of sink. As if the opening of her mouth to Zelmane had opened some great floodgate of sorrow, whereof her heart could not abide the violent issue, she sank to the ground. Sidney.

Our men followed them close, took two ships, and gave divers others of their ships their death's wounds, whereof soon after they sank and perished. Bacon's War with Spain.

S A N

quently, for want of a right sanguification, are leucophlegmatick. Arbutnot on Ailments.

SANGUIFIER. n. f. [from sanguis and facio, Latin.] Producer of blood. Bitters, like choler, are the best sanguifiers, and also the best febrifuges. Player on the Humours.

TO SANGUIFY. v. n. [from sanguis and facio, Latin.] To produce blood. At the same time I think, I command: in inferior faculties, I walk, see, hear, digest, sanguify, and carnify, by the power of an individual soul. Hale.

SANGUINARY. adj. [from sanguinaris, Lat. sanguinaire, French; from sanguis, Latin.] Cruel; bloody; murderous. We may not propagate religion by wars, or by sanguinary persecutions to force consciences. Bacon.

The scene is now more sanguinary, and fuller of actors: never was such a confused mysterious civil war as this. Howel.

Passion transforms us into a kind of savages, and makes us brutal and sanguinary. Broom's Notes on the Odyssey.

SANGUINARY. n. f. [from sanguis, Lat.] An herb. Ainsworth.

SANGUINE. adj. [from sanguis, Fr. sanguineus, from sanguis, Lat.] 1. Red; having the colour of blood. This fellow Upbraided me about the rose I wear; Saying, the sanguine colour of the leaves Did represent my master's blushing cheeks. Shak. H. VI.

A stream of nect'rous humour issuing flow'd Sanguine. Milton.

Dire Tisiphone there keeps the ward, Girt in her sanguine gown. Dryden.

Her flag aloft, spread rustling to the wind, And sanguine streamers seem the flood to fire: The weaver, charm'd with what his loom design'd, Goes on to sea, and knows not to retire. Dryden.

2. Abounding with blood more than any other humour; cheerful. The cholerick fell short of the longevity of the sanguine. Bro.

Though these faults differ in their complexions as sanguine from melancholy, yet they are frequently united. Gov. of Tongue.

3. Warm; ardent; confident. A set of sanguine tempers ridicule, in the number of foppes, all such apprehensions. Swift.

SANGUINE. n. f. [from sanguis.] Blood colour. A grievously wound, From which forth gush'd a stream of gore, blood thick, That all her goodly garments stain'd around, And in deep sanguine dy'd the grassy ground. Fa. Queen.

SANGUINENESS. n. f. [from sanguine.] Ardour; heat of ex-

SANGUINITY. n. f. [from sanguine.] Confidence. Sanguinity is perhaps only used by Swift. Rage, or phrensy it may be, in some perhaps natural courage, or sanguineness of temper in others; but true valour it is not, if it